- Understand the benefits of creating rapport in a virtual environment
- Build and develop trust with your audience
- Identify the elements that will make a huge difference when you are presenting online
- Practice your new skills and receive expert feedback from experienced TV presenter, Alastair Greener

With more and more of us working from home, we have become overnight TV presenters. Virtual meetings are here to stay, so how do you get your message across in a way that is engaging and builds trust? How do you keep your audience's attention when studies show that up to 65% of them will be preoccupied with other tasks?

Our skilled Presenting with Impact, virtually trainer, Alastair Greener, has over 25 years' experience as a TV presenter and knows exactly what is needed to come across well on camera. The course is packed with practical tips and invaluable advice that will leave you more confident presenting your next online session, leading to more effective and impactful virtual meetings and presentations.
